Wait, the able superintendent of the New York Institution of the Blind, in the forty-second annual report of that institution, says: An institution for the blind, is necessarily more complex in its organization than any other establishment, whether educational or otherwise. Each of its three departments of instruction--literary, musical and industrial--is a school in and of itself. Pupils, teachers and employees, being resident, constitute a large family, the wants of which are numerous, varied and incessant. The purchase of groceries, provisions, dry goods and materials of various kinds at fair prices; the proper distribution and use of the same; the keeping of systematic and thorough books of accounts; the making and repairing of clothing; the maintenance of discipline;...
