Should the substance of the following items become impressed upon the memory of the soldier or traveler, I feel sure that he will find some of the hints useful when in positions of responsibility and having few or no facilities. I have numbered the paragraphs for the convenience of future reference. 1. When the boots or shoes become water-soaked, it is a splendid plan to fill them full of oats or barley, if at hand. The grain rapidly absorbs the moisture and, in expanding, prevents the boot or shoe from shrinking. 2. The efficiency of the following method of picketing horses or of even securing the ropes of a tent in a dry and sandy soil, where the pickets or pins will not hold, is wonderful. Simply tie to the end of the rope some article with a longitudinal dimension of at least four inches; anything will do --a stick, some twigs, a stone or tent peg. Plant this from one to three feet in the sand. If it be buried one foot deep in ordinary dry and sandy soil, it will require a strain of about twenty-five pounds to draw it up; if it be buried two feet deep, it will require a force of more than 80 pounds to draw it up, and it will require more than 500 pounds if buried three feet deep. Theoretically this is obvious --for, supposing the earth to consist of smooth,...
