Africa Institute of South Africa, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .This book represents what might be called symbolic capital in the sense that, under the rubric of the Concerned Africans Forum (CAF), it is an attempt to develop a different set of lenses for understanding many of the critical themes that shape South African current public discourse and body of opinion. This kind of capital that the CAF has promoted is not only about how these themes are articulated and expressed from a progressive and critical perspective. It is also, quite crucially, about how the use of this capital can serve to influence debate and understanding as well as the agenda of public discussion, especially as this relates to Africa. The offerings contained in the book have evolved out of the presentations and discussions that the CAF has hosted since its inception. The Forum had its origin in the West s manipulative intrigue in engineering regime change in Libya, together with tendentious and self-serving media coverage n both Western and South African - that went with it. The Libyan conflict again demonstrated the consequences of the imbalance in the global power relations. Thus those with preponderant political and military power could take decisions to determine the future of Libya, to the detriment of the Libyan and African peoples. The CAF Open Letter on Libya was very prescient and warned about the dangers that would accompany the social and political trauma of regime change in that country. Other similar open letters or statements also followed on Syria. These have been reproduced at the end of the book. However, it is in the strategic and topical relevance of many other issues addressed in its chapters that the book has added immense...
