Excerpt: .It is to supplement the advantages for the right study of music in neighborhoods where at present the conditions are not favorable; and to supply inspiration in the concerted relations under which the extension studies are carried forward; this is quite large enough field for as many workers as can see their way to cooperate in it. The extension is a movement for promoting study, true musical knowledge, and the discipline which study brings; and not for providing authenticating examinations for any professional purpose whatever. This is the only spirit in which wide usefulness can be accomplished. To work for an examination is to cram; it is to fix attention upon the superficial and external, in place of the inner. This one may see in the manner in which students work up their preparations for the examinations for the College of Musicians. They prepare...
