It must have been a fearsome sight - great waves of melted. Rock rolling around the earth and tall flames shooting into the sky. Ages passed, and the earth began to cool. As it cooled, the rock hardened, forming a crust all over the outside. The earth cooled more and more, and the crust grew thicker and thicker. Now the crust is about a hundred miles thick. Inside the crust the great ball of the earth was still very hot. The weight of the crust pressed upon the hot ball, keeping it still and solid, but wherever the boiling rock, which we call lava, could find a crack in the crust, it burst through and flowed in streams out over the crust. Cracks in the earth's crust out of which lava pours are called volcanoes. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
