For web searchers, Googlepedia describes how Google indexes web pages and ranks search results, and provides step-by-step instructions on conducting both basic and advanced queries. All types of searches are presented, including searches of specific government and university web sites. Finally, webmasters and website developers learn how to submit their pages to Google for indexing, increase their search rankings, incorporate Google searches on their Web sites, and use Google's AdSense service to make money from any sized website. For all web users, Googlepedia shows how to use and master Google's web-based and software-based tools. 782 pp. Englisch.
