Big Table Publishing Company. Paperback. Condition: New. 418 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 5.8in. x 1.0in. When an idealistic college girl from Iowa meets an exciting Jamaican inventor with plans to save the world, she drops everything to begin a new life with him. What she doesn't expect - and what no woman expects - is that her husband turns out to be a brutal, abusive cheater who threatens to kill her or their children if she tries to escape. Written by a survivor of domestic violence, The Flaws that Bind takes readers inside the lonely terror and psychological trauma that battered women and children endure when there seems to be no safe way out. Leo's crisp writing style, the startling clarity with which she carries us through scenes which alternate between lush beauty and terrifying pain, complements the harrowing story of Jacqueline's decade-long struggle to gain her freedom and sense of self-worth. We are carried away by brushstrokes of dazzling imagery and fast-paced adventure. Yet, even as we barely have time to catch our breath, Leo makes space to pause, being sure to allow us the time needed to immerse ourselves in Jacqueline's experiences. Leo strikes the balance between narrative tension and explanatory story-telling. A shocking story, very well told. Vicki Addesso, co-author, Still Here Thinking of You, A Second Chance with our Mothers. Rebecca Leos memoir-based novel The Flaws that Bind is a page-turner about a woman's struggles through an abusive relationship while living in Jamaica and Australia. It deals realistically with the issues of abuse and enablement, without becoming overly sentimental. The setting itself is a character in the book, going beyond the well-written descriptions of tropical climes to evince a deeper understanding of the cultures and the effects of crime and poverty on individuals and families. This...
