Description of Athens. --Purchase of a slave. --Timon the misanthropist. --A public entertainment. --The environs of Athens. --Moral system of Lasthenia. At night Lasthenia invited me to accompany her the next day to the city, where she was about to purchase a slave. We set off very early in the morning, and entered Athens by the road that leads to the Academy, and which is planted with cypresses. Here, said Lasthenia, you can scarcely take a single step without walking over the ashes of a hero. There, continued she, are the altars of the Muses, of Mercury, of Hercules, and of Minerva. That large olive-tree, to your right, is the second that arose in Attica. Those are the tombs of Thrasylulus, of Pericles, of Chabrias, and of Phormio. There are the cenotaphs of our brave warriors who have died in battle; and...
