Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. This is a story about two guys from Cleveland, Ohio, Bill Schlageter and the author Myron Stoll who tried to do something we had never done before, start a business. We did this in a country we knew nothing about, had never visited, and did not know the language-even the letters of that language seemed strange. But the key in doing this was not doing something totally new, but building on the knowledge and skills we had acquired. It is the story of how we started a wireless telephone company in Lviv in Western Ukraine and what happened in the years afterward. It is a story about a journey that lasted sixteen years, beginning one year after Ukraine gained its independence. The purpose of the journey was to start a business, but the people on that journey created a complex story. The purpose in writing this story is to share this journey, with the hope that this story will encourage, not discourage, people to apply their skills to do something they want to do, but have never done. To do this is a real challenge because the endless variables of life make it difficult to predict success. It takes an abundance of enthusiasm and desire to sustain the hard effort. It is people who made the difference. It will become a privilege and wisdom will be gained in walking through and seeing the new garden in your life. For fifteen years, I have been telling our friends stories about this journey. For five years they all said stop talking about it, write the book. For the past five years I have been working on...
