The church so clearly raised up by Divine Providence to fulfill the mission upon which she has so auspiciously entered, the church with such unparalleled responsibility upon her and with such transcendent possibilities before her, must not and will not fail to make generous provision for the liberal training of her sons and daughters, and of her coming ministry, in seats of learning where the water of life shall flow to Castilian founts and Parnassus Heights shall be gilded with the glory of the cross. In an address delivered a few years ago I heard a gentleman of distinction relate the following incident: In the battle of Cedar Mountain a part of the brigade had gotten quite in advance of their comrades in a seemingly perilous position, and the division commander, seeing the situation, ordered that the colors should be brought back. The brigade commander, with better knowledge of the real condition of affairs and unwilling to beat a retreat called out in tones that thrilled the hearts of the men, Bring the men up to the colors! The man who uttered those memorable words was three times governor of Ohio, once president of the United States and--honor equal to that of any other position--a trustee of a Methodist college. That man was Rutherford B. Hayes. The man who related the incident was Major McKinley. The educational institutions of Methodism have carried their colors with courage up to...
