Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .receiving thanks for Indian soldiers furnished during the war. After patiently struggling for years, through opposition and poverty, a portion of the balance due, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars without interest, was finally allowed by the Court of Claims, appealed to the United States Supreme Court, and there affirmed; but was not paid until the fall of 1896. The old chief was present at the opening of the World s Fair, May 1, 1893. He saw with a critic s eye aliens and strangers from every land take their seats on the great platform in the shadow of the gilded dome of the Administration building; he saw the Duke of Veragua and suite, as well as foreign commissioners, take the platform of honor in front, while he and a few others of his race, the only true Americans, stood in the background, unnoticed and unprovided for. When all was ready, the orchestra struck the Columbian March, prayer was offered for all nationalities in a general way, which I suppose must have included the Indians. After President Cleveland had responded to the address of welcome by the director, he touched the electric button, and the World s Columbian Exposition was born, filled with life and spirit. From the time the Columbian Fair was first talked of, the old chief had had a great desire to have the educated people of his race hold a congress there, so as to inform the world of what they had accomplished...
