XIII SUMMARY An upstream tax may be somewhat easier to implement Alternatively, major emitting nations could agree to link their cap-and-trade programs. In that case, competitive than an upstream cap-and-trade program because many forces would equalize the price of allowances between of the entities that would be covered by either policy are 4 countries and create consistent incentives to reduce emis-already subject to excise taxes. A CO tax could build on 2 sions. Uniformity of monitoring and enforcement would that existing structure. Implementing a cap-and-trade be even more important in such an international pro-program, by contrast, would probably require a new gram. With harmonized taxes, lax monitoring or enforce-administrative infrastructure. However, the Environmen-ment by any one country could reduce the incentives for tal Protection Agency's experience with the Acid Rain emission reductions in that country. But with linked cap-Program ( a cap-and-trade program designed to reduce and-trade programs, laxity in one area could undermine emissions of sulfur dioxide by electricity generators )...
