Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The American Iron and Steel Manufacturing Company, Lebanon s Great Iron Works: Read Before the Lebanon County Historical Society, April 20, 1916 The original crude square iron, in time, was replaced by round bars of uniform and perfect shape; the swaging block gave place to the rolling mill with its trains; automatic machinery has largely done the work formerly required of the human machine and human muscles; oil and coal dust now. Supply heat, and the dense smoke from great stacks is no longer an indication of business activity; electricity has supplanted the steam engine, and the great buildings of great corporations now occupy the space where humble little shops in the past turned out, in their feeble way, more goods than a doubting world was willing to consume, and at a price which it would now be impossible to obtain.
