In the flourishing condition of empires, disease has been kept at bay--industry and cultivation has kept pace with population, the arts and sciences have flourished, and man has fulfilled the great end of his being. With the decay of the arts and enervation of a people, cultivation has been abandoned--negligence has supplid the place of industry, and the mouldering columns and dilapidated palaces are the sure forerunners of the pestilence that sweeps its desolating besom over the land, and finishes that which man has commenced. The sombre aspect of the Ottoman Empire, and the flourishing condition of Great Britain, furnish impressive pictures of the truth of these remarks--the former being in the most neglected and sickly state--the latter the best cultivated and healthiest country in Europe. It is thus that fate, foredoomed by negligence...
