In any organization, be it the office where filing work and typing activities are carried out, or the factory where production of goods takes place, there is inevitably inefficiency, such as unnecessary movements resulting in fatigue in the person performing the task and hence inducing even greater inefficiency, and longer time taken to perform a task than is necessary. The heavy responsibility of work study or methods analysis falls squarely on the shoulders of the work study officer or the industrial engineer. This book will be important to those who are keen on efficiency, eliminating wasted effort, time and materials, higher productivity, and, higher profitability, in the organization. It shows the reader how a desirable work method could be systematically designed such that a job could be performed with the least effort and time, the least wastage of materials and the greatest efficiency or productivity possible. Several case studies are incorporated to challenge the reader s creativity of thought.
