SAD KXPERIENCE. IUNE 20 They have chosen their own ways. --Isa. lxvi. 3. MAN S heart at first is like a plain table; unspotted, indeed, but then there is nothing legible in it. As soon as ever we ripen towards the imperfect uses of our reason, we write upon this table such crooked characters, such imperfect configurations, so many fooleries, and stain it with so many blots, that there is nothing worth the reading in our hearts (or a great while. And when education and ripeness, reason and experience, Christian philosophy and the grace of God, have made fair impressions, and written the law in our hearts with the finger of God s Holy Spirit, we blot out this handwriting of God s ordinances, or mingle it with false principles and interlinings of our own; we disorder the method of...
