Excerpt from Advocate of Peace, 1924, Vol. 86 If our international perspective be clear, we shall not lose sight of the existing machinery for international arbitration, machinery for which the United States is in no small sense responsible. Here is a system which has operated in nearly a score of disputes, doing no violence to our traditional independence. For business or for politics, there is plenty of machinery for the application of the principles of good offices, mediation, inquiry, and conciliation. If nations were peacefully minded, there is machinery enough at hand to maintain the peace. If nations are war-minded, no machinery can stop them from war. We have international law. The World War did not destroy this international law; indeed, the war was fought in defense of international law. International law is the warp and woof of diplomacy and of all the other means of settling international disputes. The Hague system represents the most rational attempt the world has ever seen to advance international law. This Hague system still exists. It was not accident that led the League of Nations to place its new Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague. The nomination of the judges for this new court comes from The Hague system. The Court of Arbitration established at The Hague in 1899 has settled nearly a score of international disputes to the satisfaction of the parties. There is a Hague secretariat Capable of carrying on the details of a third Hague conference. To forget or to ignore these things would indeed reveal an utter lack of international perspective.
