Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2016. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .A WORD TO TEACHERS Use special care in the assignment of parts. You know your pupils; choose those best adapted to portray the several characters to be delineated. Be sure that all are perfect in their lines before the dialogue is given public presentation. Coach freely at the private rehearsals, as to gesture, action, voice, emphasis, inflection, articulation, position and disposition of hands and feet, movement about stage, how to enter and exit, facing and addressing audience, and every detail that makes for a perfect performance. Be elocutionist, stage manager and property man as well as teacher. Remember that in all likelihood your young actors have everything to learn about stage matters and are dependent upon you to instruct them. Have at least two dress rehearsals, and more if needed. That means rehearsal in full costume, and with all properties, entrances and exits definitely arranged, everything as it will be at the public performance. We will not remind you to be patient; that's part of your regular business! * * * * A WORD TO THE AMATEUR PERFORMER Learn every word of your part thoroughly, and as much of the parts of others who are on with you as will aid you in coming in with your lines at the right place. In other words, learn your cues as well as your lines. If your opposite in a dialogue makes a bungle of your cue, be prepared to speak your lines at the correct place, regardless of that. Keep your head and don't get rattled. Learn to face your audience, to speak toward them, and not to turn your back on them, even to exit. Learn where...
