CHAPTER XIV BRITISH EAST AFRICA continued) As the season advances, from the thick forest which covers the slopes of Kenia bands of elephants move out and play havoc with the shambas which lie near. At times they wander far afield, and a short time before we reached Rumuruti four good elephants had been killed in the swamp close by. It was in the shambas that we hoped to get them, so sending the safari on ahead, we left Embu after lunch and camped that night, a long four hours ride distant, on the fringe of the forest. A few natives came in to visit us, but no one seemed to know anything about elephants! One had been seen three weeks previously, but that was all! It was not a very promising outlook, and I started at dawn the next morning with no great expectations of sport. A mile or so...
