That will probably get us nowhere. As policymakers, we have always followed a two-path course to universal coverage. It is most obvious in the Medicare Program, where we have been making most national health insurance policy, since I became active in health policy reform in the early 1970s. We have used both social insurance and private insurance in our financing policy changes, aiming ourselves at expanding access cov-erage and cost containment. The test for high value health insur-ance is how well it does for people when they are sick, seriously injured, or chronically ill. Its the 80 - 20 problem. Twenty percent of the people present us with 80 plus percent of the cost challenge. So the real test, choosing an insurance course to universal coverage is how well does the plan do in that regard. How many benefits a plan has...
