Among the number was Miss Dora Hastings. Dora still continued to come to Sunday-school, although she had arrived at that mysterious age when young ladies are apt to be too old for anything reasonable; but Dora, for some unaccountable reason, so at least her mother thought, clung to her little-girl habits, and went to Sunday-school; so she happened to be numbered among the guests at Mr. Birge s party. Pliny was also invited, but had chosen not to. come, so Ben Phillips had supplied his place as escort, and was now chatting with her when a new arrival was announced. Mr. Birge came to the end of the room where Dora was seated, and with her a young gentleman. Dora, he said, permit me to introduce a young friend of mine--Mr. Mallery, Miss Hastings. Now it so happened that although Theodore had been for years a member of the same Sabbath-school with this young lady, and had seen her sitting in the Hastings pew in church on every Sabbath day, still this was the first time that he had met her face to face, near enough to speak to her, since that evening so long ago when they conversed together on a momentous subject. Theodore s knowledge of the world and social distinctions had increased sufficiently to make him extremely doubtful concerning the young lady s reception; but Dora was cordial and frank, and said, Good evening, Mr. Mallery, as she would have...
