Shaker Verlag Apr 2005, 2005. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 212x148x15 mm. Neuware - This volume presents nine comparative studies elaborated by social workers who have graduated as Master of Social Work in Merseburg/Germany in September 2004. The studies are brief and thus incomplete versions of their master thesis. In all cases the empirical research the students have done abroad, mostly interviews with experts, are not presented here. As the master programme is an international one and has its scientific and practical focus on comparative research, these studies give a European view on social work and social policy: similarities can be identified, differences are to be appreciated. Why legislation and practice differ Is there any 'model' which can be accepted We are far from claiming convergence and far from demanding homogeneity. The variety of legislation and practice is, more than ever, a mean to better perceive and understand what can be done to improve own policies and services. Agnes Tonkunaite (Lithuania) directs our attention to the fact that there has been migration from Lithuania to EU since the 1990s prior to the full membership of this state. Compared with Belgians who used the right of free movement, the motivation and conditions of life of those Lithuanians have been particular. She is pleading for more information and counselling services. Anja Fahsl (Germany) deals with the role and function of social workers in a very special setting: as members of psychosocial teams in oncology hospitals. As the societal and political background in Norway and Germany seems to be very similar, the comparison leads to general aspects of professional self-definition. The historical and political situation in Estonia and the Czech Republic after 1989/1990 appeared to be similar when church related welfare associations are to be refunded. Lehti Veeväli (Estonia) explains the differences in developing...
