Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 70: December 3, 1908 Thousands of eyes were dimmed with tears that afternoon, and well they might. It was a pitiable sight to see the brave young Italian runner fail in sight of the goal, to see him meet with defeat just as victory was about to crown his brow. He had run well but he was unable to endure to the end. Had he been able to hold out a little longer he would have come off Victorious. While reflecting on that memorable event, I was reminded of the saying of an ancient writer: The race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong, and also of the words of the Master, He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved. Brethren and sisters, what a solemn lesson we can learn from the result of that race! We, too, are running a race, the race of our lives. The prize is beyond price - glory, honor, immortality, eternal lives, thrones, principalities, powers, with the privilege of dwelling in the presence of God and the Lamb forever and ever. We may say we commenced the race when we became members of the Church of Christ. How are we running to-day Are we gaining ground or are we falling behind? Have we as bright hopes to-day as we had when we started? Are we running as those who expect to win, or do we feel like giving up in despair? Not a few who started out in this race of life dropped by the wayside, when they were almost within sight of the goal. Many men who figured prominently in...
