Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: . . . us that, if sins are confessed and forsaken, mercy is obtained--43. (This rule is observed by God and it should be observed also by men.) What did Joseph say to his brothers in order that they might believe that he did not intend to punish them--44. He even added that not they with their evil deeds but rather who had brought him to Egypt--45. He also assigned which reason for Gods bringing him to Egypt--46. (He sees Gods mighty hand directing everything, employing even the sins of men to carry out His thoughts of love and mercy for mankind.) Who of you is able to recite the passage which tells us that the Lord is oft times wonderful in counsel--47. What did Joseph finally bid his brothers do--48. Why did he wish to have Jacob together with his whole house-hold come to Egypt--49. What did Joseph intend to do for all in Egypt--50. When at length did his brothers believe that he had heartily forgiven them all--51. What did they then finally venture to do--52. What did Joseph then do at Pharaohs command--53. What did he give his brothers in particular--54. What admonition did he give them to be heeded on their homeward journey--55. What might easily have become a cause of discord among them (Answer: The question, Who was most to blame for the selling of Joseph)--56. Thus they received the punishment for their sin--great fear and affliction; to what end...
