Excerpt from Speech of Mr. Calhoun, of South Carolina, on the Bill Making Further Appropriation to Bring the Existing War With Mexico to a Speedy and Honorable Conclusion, Called the Three Million Bill: Delivered in the Senate of the United States, February 9, 1847 The first and leading condition that ought to govern should be to select a line that would fully accomplish the objects to be effected in making the war avoiding the appearance, however, of taking any portion of the country on the mere principle of a war of conquest. But what may be required in reference to this consideration may be enlarged by the other considerations he would now proceed to state. The first and most important of them is, that in selecting a defensive line, it should be such as to possess, in the greatest degree, such natural advantages as would require the smallest sacrifice of men and money to defend it; and among others, such as would afford every facility for drawing promptly supplies of men and provisions from the adjoining country. The next...
