

China Diaries: A Novel of Pre-War China

By MR Louis Stannard

Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Few remember there was a war raging in China years before Pearl Harbor was bombed. Though most are aware of Europe's holocaust, China was experiencing its own suffering under the Japanese siege of Shanghai, the infamous rape of Nanking, the capture of Hankow and finally Hong Kong the day World War 2 began. Almost missing from this history is the story of sex slavery and atrocity: of the so-called comfort women, of wholesale massacres, medical experiments, germ and biological warfare. Then there is the story of stateless refugees fleeing the holocaust of Germany and Russia seeking refuge under China's extraterritoriality laws-laws that stoked even higher the flames of Chinese resentment already burning for most anything foreign. Fewer still remember the major part played Pan American World Airways and their subsidiary, CNAC, the Chinese National Aviation Corporation. As the Japanese closed remaining seaports and all but the famous Burma Road, these airlines provided the only communication left with the West. Indeed, during the days after Pearl Harbor one of Pan Am's Clippers, trapped in Australia, flew...
