Or is it a fish? Yes, it s a fish with some characteristics of a parrot, a bird - that s why it s called a parrotfish. The parrotfish mainly got its name for the formation of its teeth. The teeth in their mouths are arranged in such a unique way that no other fish has. To be more specific, their teeth are tightly arranged and packed along their jawbones to make their mouths seem like a bird s beak. In particular, their mouth is formed like a parrot s beak. Excited to learn more about the parrotfish? Get a copy of this book and discover more fascinating information about the animals!.
