Bemont) the Editor of the Revue Hstorqztc, and Honorary Doctor of Letters in the University of Oxford. He is unconscious of his influence: it is none the less real. He has done so much to illuminate the English history of the thirteenth century, that he must not be surprised if others try to use the light he has shed to explore new paths. owe a large debt of gratitude to myold pupil, Father Bede arrett, of the Order of Preachers. When we were once discussing together the development of representation, and I was urging the point I have urged here, that the Church supplied both the idea of representation and its rules of procedure, he suggested to me that the influence of his own Order must have been considerable within the Church, and he gave me y first knowledge of the organization of his Order. He has increased my debt of late by sending me some references which he had collected.
