These words are omitted by the best manuscripts, and by Lachmann, Tischendorf, Tregelles, and Alford.--To curse and to swear. Matt. 36: 74, note.--When he thought thereon. Much difficulty has been experienced In rendering the Greek word (imiaiir), so translated. For a list of interpretations see Alford. Our English version is probably the best. He thought thereon, is not synonymous with he called to mind. That was the bare momentary remembrance, the word occurred to him; this is the thinking, or, as we sometimes say, casting it over, going back step by step over the sad history. --Alford.) Comp. Psalm 119:59; Lam. 3:40; Hag. 1:8.--He wept. The verb is in the imperfect tense, and signifies something more than a mere transient...
