The National Institution, later changed to National Institute, was established on May 15, 1840, by the adoption of a constitution and a declaration of its objects, which were to promote science and the useful arts, and to establish a national museum of natural history, etc. The founding of this society, as Dr. Goode explains, was doubtless to a very great degree due to the stimulating and inspiring effects upon public opinion of the Smithsonian bequest. It acquired extensive collections of its own and for a short time also had custody of the Government collections, which were assembled and exhibited in a large hall in the Patent Office building, whence, in 1858 and 1862, they were transferred, in accordance with law, to the Smithsonian Institution. The plan of the National Institution, says Dr. Goode, was conceived in a broad and liberal spirit; its membership was a strong one, including at the beginning about ninety representative men of Washington, Members of Congress, scientific men, clergymen and prominent citizens, and as many more corresponding members, among whom were all the leading men of the country. Among its principal officers were the Secretary of War,...
