Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Louisiana Conservationist, Vol. 13: January 1961 That s about the only drawback I can think of to hunting and fishing on Barksdale Air Force Base, where the above-described scene could have taken place. To understand What has happened at Barksdale, which lies just outside Shreveport in the north west corner of Louisiana, we must first realize that this air base is more than just landing strips, administration buildings, and barracks. It covers a big chunk of country, more than acres. The land for this base was bought by the people of Shreveport and donated to the government. The vast undeveloped part of it became known as the East Reservation, and was used as a bombing and gunnery range up until 1945.
