Executive Summary This event was conducted to evaluate the form, fit, and user acceptance of the Future Force Warrior ( FFW ) body systems and headgear system ensembles ( without functional electronics ). The ensembles included new components and the addition of leader and Soldier variations. They were evaluated in the context of dismounted Infantry tactical activities. Additionally, the experiment investigated the form, fit, and comfort, of a chemical and biological ( CB ) over-garment with a functional personal air ventilation system ( PAVS ) and a functional personal air-purifying respirator ( PAPR ). The experiment was executed from 9 to 13 May 2005, with one Infantry squad as participants. Soldiers received familiarization training about the prototype equipment. They were briefed at the start of each exercise to explain the event requirement. The exercises included an overland open terrain environment, an urban warfare environment, and an individual movement techniques course. Results indicated that the Soldiers liked many aspects of the FFW equipment and...
