BOOKET, 2016. Condition: Nuevo. 16 de julio de 1846. En la casa parroquial del pueblecito inglés de Haworth, las tres hijas del pastor comienzan la jornada ocupándose de las tareas domésticas mientras esperan que llegue la tarde, cuando puedan sentarse juntas para dedicarse a escribir a escondidas las novelas que ansían publicar. Son las hermanas Brontë, tres mujeres solteras de alrededor de treinta años que, desde la infancia, gracias a la literatura, han sobrevivido a las tragedias familiares, la falta de recursos económicos y el aislamiento. Durante ese verano, Charlotte escribe Jane Eyre. Emily se dedica a Cumbres borrascosas. Y Anne se concentra en Agnes Grey. Ignorando el extraordinario destino que espera a sus obras literarias, las tres viven en ellas sus sueños, sus frustraciones y sus pasiones ocultas, convirtiendo aquella casa oscura y vulgar, atravesada por las muertes tempranas de muchos de sus habitantes, en un espacio lleno de luz. Todo ese fuego es una novela exquisita que bucea en la vida de tres asombrosas mujeres llenas de talento, que consiguieron rebelarse contra las crueles normas de la sociedad victoriana y convertirse en grandes escritoras en un mundo reservado a los hombres.
