In the summer of 1988, Michele Maxwell spent a week in the village of Medjugorje, in what is now Bosnia-Herzegovina. In that small village, it was claimed that the Blessed Virgin Mary, the mother of Jesus, had been appearing daily to six children since June 1981. The apparitions continue to this day, and all of the visionaries have now grown up, married, and are raising families of their own. The Queen of Peace, as Mary identified herself in Medjugorje, remains. Mary, Matrix of Change: Personal and Global Transformation through the Rosary is the story of Michele Maxwell's personal experience visiting the apparition site, and especially the hallmark phenomenon of rosaries changing from silver-toned metal to gold in that place. Drawing from her knowledge of transpersonal psychology, quantum physics, and integral philosophy, the author delivers an innovative yet accessible book that is an insightful treatment of the Blessed Virgin Mary and the Holy Rosary. Meditating upon the twenty rosary mysteries can serve, the author writes, as a remarkable tool for spiritual transformation and the evolution of consciousness so desperately needed on our planet today. In Mary's words, With prayer even the laws of nature can be suspended, and the author saw evidence of that again and again, both alone and in large groups of pilgrims who witnessed miracles en masse. The recurring theme then, and now within the pages of this uplifting book, is Pray, pray, pray. By far, the most amazing conversion wrought through prayer is the transformation of the human person. Medjugorje is a modern-day sign of this miracle of inner change.
