There was no provision in the contract for building the new capitol for a corner stone, nor was there any appropriation in law for defraying the expenses of procuring a suitable one, if the capitol board saw proper to have one. What was to be done? He had spoken to a number of citizens of Austin upon the subject, and they had told him that they would contribute of their private means toward purchasing and preparing a corner stone, suitable to ornament the grand structure, and to make the occasion of laying that stone a notable and memorable one in the history of the State. Thus encouraged, Captain Walsh laid the matter before the capitol board, when he was authorized to represent, and in all things act for, the board in the matter of the corner stone. A heavy load had thus been put upon his shoulders, but...
