Author Jean Bruce who had worked with the National Museums of Canada, put together this fascinating and informative book of Canadian social history post WWII , with regard to immigrants who were admitted to Canada. She quotes from the Canadian Minister of Immigration of the time, in dispatches, public and private; some of which seem shocking to modern sensibilities. Quotes from hundreds of interviews with the immigrants; war brides from Britain , refugees and displaced persons from all countries in Europe, including Germany and Holland, and later, Asia, create a picture of Canada at a vibrant period...
