From my home on Bella Vista Avenue there can be seen at night the beautifully-lighted cars on six electric lines. Many an hour, in the gloaming and later, I have watched these fiery chariots as they seemed to glide on magic pinions, bearing their precious freightage of human life in so many different directions, and they have seemed like so many heavenly messengers, bearing good tidings and blessings to our race. And these nightly visions have been preceded and accompanied by daily concerts of the sweetest music ever heard on earth--not the music of human voices blended in almost divine harmony, nor the music of skilfullyconstructed instruments swept by deft and artful fingers, but the music of human toil and industry, the sound of...
