The poet strips love down to its most basic roots, eloquently examining the emotion we all crave, need, and fear. Though the poet brings love to its roots, he slowly reveals the rings of a grown tree: each line, a branch-- each word, a leaf. From sonnets, sharp-witted quotes, and a short story, this book proves why love, from birth to death, is an important part that envelops our lives. Without love, humans would not exist.
