By Deborah Heal

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Note to Self: You can t afford your dream house, even if is the absolute best one you ll ever find. And stop dreaming about Brett, too. Remember, he s just a friend. In Lebanon, Illinois the annual Victorian Holiday Festival kicks off a month of celebrating Christmas-and Charles Dickens. He s the town s claim to fame ever since he stayed at the Mermaid Inn during his 1842 tour of America. But judging from the snarky comments Dickens wrote in his travelogue, he was certainly not a fan of Lebanon. Professor Merrideth Randall gets the opportunity to find out why when her dream house goes on the market, and a realtor gives her a key to the front door. Built in 1839, it sits right across the street from the Mermaid Inn, so it s the perfect place to use her amazing time-rewinding computer software. Brett Garrison, brilliant professor of physics during the workday, and her witty partner in historical adventures during the off hours, goes along with her. But spending time with the man she loves-while pretending they re...
