It is one of the most popular publications. It really is filled with knowledge and wisdom. It has been designed in an exceedingly straightforward way and it is merely soon after I finished reading this PDF by which it actually transformed me, affecting the way in my opinion.

Time plays an essential role in most real world fluid mechanics problems, e. g. turbulence, combustion, acoustic noise, moving geometries, blast waves, etc. Time dependent calculations now dominate the computational landscape at the various NASA Research Centers but the accuracy of these computations is often not well understood. In this presentation, we investigate error representation (and error control) for time-periodic problems as a prelude to the investigation of feasibility of error control for stationary statistics and space-time averages. o These statistics and averages (e. g. time-averaged lift and drag forces) are often the output quantities sought by engineers. o For systems such as the Navier-Stokes equations, pointwise error estimates deteriorate rapidly which increasing Reynolds number while statistics and averages may remain well behaved. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
