Plainly interpreted this order meant the sale of the medical officer s house and furniture at a ruinous loss, the deprivation of this lien on 50 per cent. of his Grievances of the Indian Medical Service. 225 salary while on furlough, and probably on his return being kept waiting for months for a station, and, if he ever obtained one, having to purchase a new house and furniture for very much more than he had realised for his own.--Letter from an Indian officer, Lancet, August 28, 1869. After continuous clamour on the part of the victims of this jugglery, the Indian Government, in 1871, rescinded the order relating to the regimental officers, but withheld the privilege from the civil medical officers, although the revised civil furlough regulations reserved for the civilian a lien on his substantive appointment. In 1867 the new consolidated pay...
