Not illustrated. 1835 Excerpt: .from the merchants all entries for merchandise intended to be shipped for the benefit of drawback, either direct from this district to a foreign port, or to another district to be exported from thence to a foreign port. This is also an important duty, and on the vigilance and correctness of these clerks, much depends to secure the Government from loss, as it is essential they should compare all export entries with the inward ones, to see the amount of drawback on each particular so exported, and that no greater quantity of articles, paying a specific duty, than was imported, should be exported, for which purpose they must refer to all the returns of weight, gauge, measurement, c, outward, and compare with the same returns inward, and note on all entries, when a part only is exported. On the accuracy of these clerks, the Debenture Clerk depends for the true amount of duties with which he is to fill up the debenture the merchant or exporter is entitled to receive from the Collector; they also receive all bonds given by the exporters to produce proof of such merchandise being landed in a foreign port; make out certificates of duties to accompany the goods coastwise, c, and where the exportation is for spirits or wine, reference must be made to the Surveyor s Department. I presume I have said sufficient of these clerks to show their usefulness, and the trust reposed in them by the Collector, and...
