English art, they say, is always the same; the clever handling, the bright colours, the indispensable pretty girl's face, and the little dog, must be in every picture, whether of genre or history, whether tragic, comic, or conversational! The little dog I cannot always find, but the pretty girl's face and the bright colours, I fear, we must admit as almost universal on the walls of our exhibition rooms, and in the works of the painters who get most success with us. But on the other side of the water it is certainly not so. There are in Paris indeed many painters whose lives are devoted to the production of pretty...
