Not illustrated. 1858 Excerpt: .mind which I combine at random, and which represent themselves to me as if they were real. Dreams disquiet and delight me, busy and deceive me; and my soul rests not even in sleep from action and energy. What wonders are here united! How much is concentrated here by which the omniscient foresight of God is illustrated. But how many obscurities are there still at which the human understanding must pause, and on which it can only ponder in tacit amazement! How can I otherwise than with the most reverential astonishment and the liveliest thankfulness, look back upon the elapsed night! O may also I remember with the most ardent emotion the Lord who closed my eyes, who preserved my blood in its course, who defended my life from every danger, and invigorated my body by gentle repose! And how were it possible with such an...
