THE THREE LIGHTS The grandeur, aye, the beauty, Of Masonic rites we find In the lessons and the teachings Which enrich the human mind; In that matchless guide that serves us Along time's chequered way, As a rule of faith and practice, Till we reach life's endless day. The square to square our actions, To make us grandly true, --To all that's high and noble Beneath yon heaven of blue; The compasses to circumscribe Our wishes and desires, To limit by the line of right Our passions melting fires. Thus, brethren, ever guided, Let us wait the coming day, When the Master's gavel calls us Far up the golden way; And I doubt not as we enter Heaven's lodge-room wide and fair, --We shall see those three lights shining, Bible, compasses and square. THE MEMORIAL HOUR...
