Clocktower Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Remember a time when you enjoyed playing board games around the kitchen table, and you rolled the dice and moved your piece around the train tracks on the board? You could buy and sell real estate in some virtual city that left much to the imagination. Maybe you fantasized what it might be like to shrink down to atomic size. You'd become a tiny person in a virtual game world with life-sized trains and cities all around you. Most excitingly, you'd meet all those fascinating people-spies, lovers, runners, shooters, or a million ordinary men and women going about their lives in a divided Gotha (think Berlin) right out of the Cold War. Interested? That metro has now arrived at your imagination station with this DarkSF novel by John Argo. Take a rocket ride on the author's inventive and original idea express. Enjoy a romantic story in a setting so far out that only John Argo could get us there and back. Best of all, the underlying concept takes us to the far edge of science. In a pocket universe of danger and intrigue, Tedda lives in a rainy metropolis right out of Brazil or Dark City. In a dark and glistening dystopia, East Gotha and West Gotha are eternal rivals trying to destroy each other in a war whose reasons nobody can fathom (aren't all wars like that?). You're about to meet a young West Gotha woman mathematician named Tedda, who commits the ultimate crime of treason - she has an affair with the dashing Captain Alton Hedrock, a spy for enemy East Gotha. Tedda becomes a prisoner in a strange West Gotha university, where she joins other programmers...
