Excerpt from The Record, Vol. 43: Hampden-Sydney College; Spring 1969 Venable, located at Slate Hill, Prince Edward County. Venable, a planter by occupation, served as the local magistrate and from this building administered the King s justice and later the laws of the young Republic. A primary force in establishing hampden-sydney, he personally sustained it with his financial support through the hard years of the Revolution. By at least one of his contemporaries he was described as the real founder of hampden-sydney. Mr. Venable s grandson, Major Richard M. Venable, class of 1857 and prominent Baltimore attorney, pur chased and donated to the College in 1898 the south portion of the campus, which until then belonged to Union Theological Seminary. Preparing students for careers in law at Hampden Sydney is as old as the College itself. Of the eight graduates in the six-year period ending in 1783 for whom there are records, three pursued law careers. One of these, William Branch Giles, was governor of the Commonwealth 1827-30. Of the students taking degrees from hampden-sydney between its founding and 1940, 539 became attorneys. Another graduate to distinguish himself during the early years of the Republic was William H. Cabell, a member of the class of 1789, whose long line of descendants has played a prominent role in the Col lege s history. A member of the first graduating class of Wythe Law School at William and Mary, and a member of the General Assembly for a number of terms, he was governor of Virginia, 1805-08. After wards, he served in the state judicial system until his death in 1853 and was president of the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia for a nine-year...
