Excerpt from Festal Gathering of the Early Settlers and Present Inhabitants of Virgil: Held on Thursday, the 25th of August, 1853 In 1794, John M. Frank, who had a patent. For lot No. 43, came to ascertain its location and condition. He came along lines of lots by marked trees. Taking the present south line of the Town, upon which his lot was bounded, made his discoveries and returned. The next year he came, made a beginning in the forest, erected a house, returned to his family and made preparations to move on. He came from Montgomery to Cooperstown, then down the Susquehanna to Chenango Point, thence up the Chenango and Tioughnioga rivers to Chaplins, thence on the State road to a point where the village now is, thence southerly, passing near where Murdock's Tannery stands, and so on over the hill to near where Mr. Litchkiss now lives, and then to the building he had erected. They arrived in November. 1795, after a journey of six weeks. And from that time till spring saw none but their own family. The man whom he had employed to move them in brought the family, and Mr. Frank came out on foot and drove seven head of cattle and six sheep. The sheep went away a little from the house a few days after their arrival, got out of sight and were never heard of after, and it was supposed that the Wolves took them. The cattle were wintered on browse, and all lived except one yearling. Samuel Marvin, who moved the family, agreed further, that he would clear two acres and furnish the family with provisions...
