Doors, R. 2 E., Back L. C, and L. 2 E. Wide window back R. C, through which the city is seen. Curtain rises on Celia, practicing a difficult etude. She sits on revolving piano stool, down L. After the curtain is up she continues, trying the same passage over and over again. As she begins the passage the third time enter Natasha, R. Natasha has a work basket, knitting material, etc. She glances at Celia, who continues practicing and does not see Natasha. Natasha places her things on table, down R., and sits at table; begins knitting or sewing, glances at Celia, sighs and looks up, as if wishing Celia would stop. Celia begins the passage all over again, and Natasha can t stand it. Natasha. Oh! (Celia starts slightly; stops playing; sees Natasha) Celia. Good gracious, nania, how you made me jump! Natasha. Jump? The stones in the street will...
