Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Architectural Magazine, 1835, Vol. 2 In completing this Second Volume of the Architectural Magazine, it is no small satisfaction to its Conductor, to be able to state, that the experiment of publishing a periodical exclusively devoted to Architecture, made by him in Britain for the first time, is likely to be attended with success. On looking over the List of Contributors to the present Volume, it will be found that the number is very considerable, taking into account the infancy of the periodical. We consider this a circumstance which promises well for the support of the Magazine, and for the diffusion of the knowledge which it contains. It would be an easy matter to hire writers to produce elaborate essays on different topics; and we might by this means fill the Magazine without the aid of voluntary contributors. But what would be the consequence? A work for the few would be produced, instead of one for the many; and such a work as could never be carried on without great pecuniary loss, and could never effect the great objects which we have in view; viz. the diffusion of a knowledge of Architecture among general readers, and the improvement both of the knowledge and the taste, not only of young architects, but of all the persons employed in the different branches of building and furnishing. We are quite aware that it is the opinion of many architects, that a little taste, in the carpenters and other mechanics that they employ, is a dangerous thing; but we consider a little taste better than none at all; and, if we live to conduct the Architectural Magazine for...
